Franklin County Emergency Notification System

The emergency notification system employed by the city of Columbus, the Ohio State University and the Franklin County Commissioners is a high-speed telephone emergency notification system that was developed to alert Franklin County residents in the event of an emergency, threat, or crisis as well as to check on health and safety. The system can reach thousands of people instantly and calls can be tailored to a specific street or set of blocks, as in the case of a hazardous waste spill.

The system utilizes a commercial database of Franklin County residents, but currently does not include cell phone and unlisted numbers. If you would like to add your cell phone or unlisted number to the database to ensure you are contacted when the emergency notification system is put into operation, please follow this link: https://ucs.tfcci.com/cgi-bin/public/generic/franklin_county_signup.cgi

If you have questions about the emergency notification system, please contact Marty Homan at (614) 462-5273 or mrhoman@FranklinCountyOhio.gov
